Testimony: I was in the neighborhood one day when I noticed the positions in question. I took it upon myself to note that although they do get the job done in timely manner, they would benefit from having much more staff available. My concerns is that based on the needs of certain social services groups, the continuity of the department could be affected if not accurate information is reported. Mine, is just an observation sight, and I hope not to mislead anyone into thinking I can provide more information other than the need internally on the Department's side for expansion does exist.

RE: RESOLUTION 23-170, RESOLUTION 23-171 and RESOLUTION 23-173

Comments Only

Dear Chair and Councilmembers:

The Grassroot Institute of Hawaii would like to offer its comments on Resolution 23-170, Resolution 23-171 and Resolution 23-173.

Together, these resolutions would assist the city administration in hiring for critical positions, clean up unfilled and unnecessary positions, and likely contribute to lower budgetary costs in the long-run.

>> Resolution 23-170 would request the city Department of Human Resources to submit an annual report to the Council that details unfilled city jobs.

>> Resolution 23-171 would encourage the city administration to coordinate with public sector unions in order to create a policy to abolish unfilled city positions.

>> Resolution 23-173 would request the state Legislature pass legislation allowing Hawaii's counties greater flexibility within civil service law for hiring hard-to-fill positions.

As a unit, these three resolutions would provide the Council with critical tools to identify and mitigate the city's chronic hiring challenges.

These recommendations stem from a June 2023 audit of the city's hiring process. The Office of the City Auditor noted that Honolulu had 2,458 vacant positions. Meanwhile, the city could expect to wait 139 days between posting a job and filling the vacant position.<sup>1</sup>

The auditor's report also found that "an analysis of the city's estimated 2,458 vacancies could not be conducted because DHR [the Department of Human Resources] was initially unable to provide data in a form we could utilize. Furthermore, the data that DHR did provide was inconsistent and contained errors that rendered the data potentially unreliable."<sup>2</sup>

Without reliable data, the city cannot effectively fill its vacant positions or provide reliable services to residents. The annual report, a formal policy for abolishing vacant jobs and greater flexibility under civil service law would provide data and tools with which to act on the information.

In the long-run, removing unnecessary positions from the city budget could save the city money, which could lower the tax burden for residents or increase the number of services the city is able to provide.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit our comments.

Sincerely,

Ted Kefalas
Director of Strategic Campaigns
Grassroot Institute of Hawaii
