RE: Bill 45 (2024) — RELATING TO REAL PROPERTY TAXATION

Aloha Chair Waters, Vice-Chair Kia'āina and other members of the Council,

The Grassroot Institute of Hawaii would like to offer its support for Bill 45 \(2024\), which would increase eligibility for the low-income property tax credit from $80,000 to $100,000.

Honolulu homeowners often face unpredictable changes in their property tax bills because assessments can increase rapidly year over year. Extending this program to cover more homeowners would help shield them against what has been a volatile real estate market.

Under the current low-income property tax credit, homeowners making $80,000 or less pay no more than 3% of their income on property taxes — for a maximum tax bill of $2,400.

Council increased the eligibility level from $60,000 to $80,000 in 2023.¹ A two-person household making 80% of the area median income last year would have earned about $83,840.² For 2024, the 80% AMI level for a two-person household is $89,120 — a 6.3% growth.

To keep up with growing AMI, Council should set the eligibility to at least $90,000, but a $100,000 eligibility level is preferable for two reasons.

² "Honolulu County Income Schedule by Family Size," Hawaii Housing Finance and Development Corp., 2023, p. 1; and "Honolulu County Income Schedule by Family Size," Hawaii Housing Finance and Development Corp., 2024, p. 1.

First, it would make the credit open to more individuals and families. For four-person households, $100,000 represents just over 70% of AMI for 2024.³ This income level would be low enough to qualify the family for many of the city's affordable housing programs, so why would it not qualify them for reduced property taxes?

Lower- and middle-income households, especially those with dependents, would benefit from upward adjustments in the value of the credit.

Second, increasing the credit to $100,000 now would save the Council from having to readjust it again in a few years when the 80% AMI level reaches $100,000.

Finally, in case you were unaware, almost 2,000 more Oahu homeowners applied for the credit after the Council increased the eligibility threshold eligibility last year — from 3,085 for fiscal 2024 to 5,020 for fiscal 2025,⁴ and we encourage the City and County to keep raising awareness about this important program.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify.
